A CHAPTER OF ACCIDENTS

One Person Suffers Slightly
From Electrical Circuit.

GEO. FERGUSON HURT.

Jim Chappell's Vehicle Col-
lides With Another and Thos. Harry Falls.

Friday George Ferguson, an employee of the Acme Mills, lost part of one finger by getting his hand in a pulley. It was so badly mashed that it had to be cut off.

Young Charles Turner, who takes care of the street arc lights, forgot
to use the insulated stool Friday at Ninth and Liberty streets, and received a charge of electricity that came near causing his death. He was knocked down and slightly bruised. He is all right now, but received a lesson that he will not soon forget.

James Chappell, who was driving
in a phaeton Saturday collided with a buggy. The body of his phaeton
was lifted from the running gear so quickly that he hardly knew when it was done. There was no serious damage done.

Thomas Harry, who was working on the roof of a barn Friday, fell to the ground and fractured his collar
bone. The end of the bone entered
one of his lungs, and it was thought
he was in a serious condition. Mr.
Harry is about 50 years old and
physically is not very stout.

Sewers a Certainty.

W. F. Shields the Designing Engineer employed by the Hopkinsville
Sewerage Company has advertised
for sealed proposals for constructing
the sanitary system of sewers in Hopkinsville. The bids will be opened at 8 o'clock p. m. Aug. 18th, 1905.

Plans and specifications may be examined at the offices of the company,
Hopkinsville, at the office of Mr.
Shields, 1715 Marquette B'd'g., Chicago, also at the offices of the Blackner & Post Pipe Co., St. Louis, and
the Chattanooga Sewer Pipe Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. The first contract will include not less than seven miles of main sewers. The septic tank will be located on a lot recently bought by the company on Little River on the west side of Young street. This site was selected in order that the new public school building
and that portion of the city surrounding it might be accommodated.

It is expected that the entire system will be completed in six months;
the larger part of it will likely be in operation within three months from
the time the contract is let.

SOFT DRINKS

Could Not be Had Sunday,
Hot as it Was.

With the mercury in the tube
lingering in the neighborhood of ninety degrees all day Sunday, those who thirsted for soft drinks with
nothing to be had for love or money,
contented themselves with ice water
pure and simple all day—and a long day it was.

The authorities had, at the request
of numerous citizens, asked the drug stores and the proprietors of
other places where soda water, ices,
etc., are sold to stop their sale on Sunday. The request was complied with cheerfully, and if the boys and
young men who frequent these places didn't go to church they alone
are to blame.

We are glad to see Mr. F. L. Waller again at his post of duty in the clothing department of J. H. Anderson & Co.'s, after several months'
confinement at his home with rheumatism. He will be glad to have his friends and patrons call on him.

GOVERNMENT TAKES HOLD

And the Fever Situation
Shows Quick Improvement.

DEATHS EXCEED 100.

No Danger in Kentucky
and Refugees Are Welcome to Enter State.

New Orleans, Aug. 7.—The yellow fever situation at New Orleans is believed to be distinctly improved.
Only two new centers of infection
were discovered Sunday, which is considered to be significant. The new cases discovered only numbered twenty-eight. Orders have been issued for the Government public health service to immediately take charge of the work of fighting the fever. The authorities in charge in New Orleans have pledged the people of the city to raise $250,000 for the work.

Sunday's summary of the yellow fever situation at New Orleans up to 6 p. m. is as follows:
New cases..... 28
Deaths..... 8
Total cases to date..... 533
Total deaths to date..... 105
New foci discovered..... 2

Kentucky to Be Open.

Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 7.—The State Board of Health, through Dr.
McCormack, its secretary, has sent an official communication to the local health officers of Fulton and Wickliffe directing that the local
quarantine declared in those towns
be raised. It is asserted in the communication that the local quarantine
is worse than useless, inducing a false sense of security and producing unnecessary inconvenience. It is possible that the communication will cause a clash between the local health authorities of Fulton and Wickliffe and the State Board.

SAD CASE.

Son of Mrs. Bettie Richardson Drowned Sunday.

Albert Richardson, son of Mrs.
Bettie Richardson, of Gracey, was drowned in Red river, near Clarksville, Sunday afternoon. He had been visiting relatives in Clarksville
for several days, and, in company
with some friends, went bathing in the river near where it empties into
the Cumberland and where the water is very deep. Richardson got beyond his depth and sank. His companions made every effort to rescue him but failed.

The body was not recovered until late Sunday night, when it was taken to Clarksville and prepared for burial. The interment will take place near Gracey today. Albert was the next to the youngest son of Mrs. Richardson. He was a very promising youth, quite popular with
his associates, and his untimely death
is a great shock to his mother as well
as to his host of young friends.

LAST EXAMINATION

For Teachers' Certificates
Will be Held This Month.

The August examination of whites
for certificates to teach in the public schools of the county will be held here the third Friday and Saturday
in the month. The colored examination will be held a week later.
These will be the last examinations
this year.

The examination for State teachers' certificates will also be held
Aug. 18 and 19.

At the recent examination of colored applicants to teach, four second class, eight got third
and six failed.

There are twelve three-class
schools (white) in the county without teachers. There are several who hold certificates to teach, but they
have declined to accept these schools,
as they are so small.

SUES FOR $25,000.

That Amount Asked for
Death of Walter Maddox.

D. E. Fowler, administrator of Walter L. Maddox, dec'd, has filed suit here against the L. & N. railroad company for $25,000.

Maddox was a freight brakeman,
and, on July 20, 1904, was run over
by his train at Springfield, Tenn.,
and so badly injured that death resulted in about three weeks.

It is charged that, in the absence
of the engineer, who had gone to the depot to get orders, the fireman
was operating the engine, and that it was through the carelessness of the company that he sustained the injuries which caused his death.

CASE POSTPONED.

The Telephone Trouble Not Yet Aired in Court.

The case of A. B. Johnson against
W. S. Davidson and others, growing out of the alleged removal of a private telephone line at Crofton in which Johnson had an interest, was called in County Court Saturday and by agreement set for tomorrow. As the case grows out of the rivalries
between the two telephone companies, and County Judge Fowler is a director in one of the companies, he asked the attorneys to agree upon someone else to try the case, as he preferred not to preside.

McClure's Fiction Number

Booth Tarkington, Myra Kelly, Henry Raymond Shuman Andrews, O. Henry, James Hopper, and many other authors that magazine readers eagerly wait for are in McClure's August Fiction Number.

Every sort of story is included: the solemn, the funny, the significant, the dainty, the exciting. All have certain qualities in common—interest, truth, beauty. All these picked stories from picked writers are as good as, and in some cases better than, any stories—either authors ever wrote.

This fiction number is McClure's Picture number. There are wonderful pictures in color, and in black and white. These pictures really illustrate and illuminate the stories they adorn. They contribute to a fuller enjoyment of the stories they are made for.

Aside from this fiction there is in this August number of McClure's Miss Tarbell's second and last paper on the character of John D. Rockefeller, and another of John McAuley Hunter's fine satires on business and politics, "Finances of the Shark System."

EVER WATCHFUL.

A Little Care Will Save Many Hopkinsville Readers Future Trouble.

Watch the kidney secretions. See that they have the amber hue of health; The discharge not excessive or infrequent;

Contain no "brick-dust like sediment." Doan's Kidney Pills will do this for you.

They watch the kidneys and cure them when they're sick.

Hopkinsville testimony proves it. J. W. Tunks, of 312 W. Seventh St., who is employed at the M. C. Forbes planning mill, says: "The condition of my health was such as to cause me a great deal of worry about my future. I had almost constant aching across the small of my back and the kidney secretions were highly colored, excessive and irregular, in fact, the disorder was so pronounced that it had been said I bordered on diabetes. I also suffered at times with indigestion which caused me a great deal of dis- tress. At one time, was scarcely able to do any work at all for nearly a year. I doctored and tried various remedies but nothing did me any permanent good until I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at L. A. Johnson's drug store. I had them only a few days when I noticed a change for the better and by the time I had finished the box I found they had brought about so decided an improvement in my condition as to convince me of their real worth and I am more than thankful for the relief that I have received."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

EXCELSIOR NEW STYLE.

The shades of night were falling fast. As through the Alpine valleys passed a youth who bore, half covered with ice, a banner with the strange device, "What is the secret?"

His brow was sad as it was moist. Far from the diamond-studded of his feet, And like a silver clasp on the tongue, "What is the secret?"

In happy homes he saw the light, And hoped that these weren't brightenings; But here would tell him, hence his mouth, As from his lips escaped the groan, "What is the secret?"

"Try not the past," the old man said; "Dark lowers the tempest overhead." And vainly asked of maidens and men, "What is the secret?"

"Beware the pine tree's withered branch, Beware the awful avalanche!" Again he asked where he was at, "What is the secret?"

The pious monks pour the bright, Asked faintly if they heard aright. A voice cried through the startled air, Uttered the oft-repeated prayer, "What is the secret?"

There in the twilight, cold and gray, Lifeless, but beautiful, he lay, Still bearing in his hand of ice That banner with the strange device, "What is the secret?"

Those Silk Pajamas

"YOU must have left those two suits of pajamas in New York," said Mr. Blinks, in answer to his husband's anxious inquiry.

"Nothing of the sort," he replied, "After I packed my grip I looked in every bureau drawer and in every corner of the room, and I didn't leave even a cake of soap behind."

"But, my dear, I unpacked your grip when you came home and the pajamas were not in it. I can swear to that."

Mrs. Blinks said, with equal conviction, "Well, I know I packed them, and they were in my grip when I came home. It makes no difference now what you think of them. We can't find them."

"Hereafter, then, don't contradict me when I tell you anything, I know what I was talking about when I said I saw those pajamas. We'll say no more about it."

During the next week Mrs. Blinks was ideal. Not since their honeymoon had she shown him so much attention and

"By the way, John, did Frank ever see those pajamas you left in New York?"

Mrs. Blinks looked up quickly to find her husband's face very red. Before he could speak the brother added:

"Oh, yes, I gave them to him when he met us in Chicago. Don't you remember?"

John could not speak. Mrs. Blinks saw through his deception and a look of great peace came over her face. She spared him any further mention of the subject at breakfast and when the folks had departed the next day and she found herself face to face with her husband alone she looked him square in the eye, and said with terrible meaning:

"I'm going down town this morning to get me a new hat."

"All right, dear," Blinks answered, "It may be rather expensive," she continued, thoroughly sure of her ground.

"All right," Blinks replied, huskily. "I'll have them send the bill to you," she remarked, carelessly.

Blinks nodded his head. He had nothing further to say. It was coming to him as he got it—Kansas City Star.

DUMB, SPEAKS IN INSTANT

Deaf, He Is Able to Hear, Creating a Great Surprise to Large Crowd of Argentina, Kan.

Kansas City, Mo.—This vicinity has been the scene of a wonderful miracle. The deaf was made to hear and the dumb to talk in an instant in sight of many.

"Jack" Murphy, an itinerant beggar, was before Police Judge Trowbridge, of Argentine, Kan. The officer who arrested him showed an old letter through which "Jack" had been acquiring financial aid.

The letter stated that the possessor had at one time been a miner, but an accident had caused him to become deaf and dumb; that he had several small children, and that the Lord would remember those who helped the poor.

Judge Trowbridge looked over his glasses at the prisoner and said to Hugh Smith, city attorney: "I guess we'd better give this fellow about ten days."

"Faith, that's too much," said the deaf and dumb prisoner. "Gimme ten minnts an I'll never trouble yez again."

The astonished court constated once more with the city attorney. "I'll give you exactly ten minutes to make yourself scarce," said Judge Trowbridge. The deaf man said he was walking at a rapid rate toward west- ern Kansas.

Carnivorous Fish.

"Naturally the fish of the deep portions are carnivorous, no vegetable life being found below 200 fathoms," writes W. S. Huxford in Harper's Magazine.

"In the Atlantic ocean the Saragasso sea, containing 3,000,000 square miles of surface—a great marine prairie as large as the whole of the United States exclusive of Alaska and dependent islands—affords vegetable food for uncountable animals, which, in their due time, die and are precipitated to the depths, their bodies in turn to be eaten by the animals which live far below all vegetation.

So it is throughout the whole ocean, animal life is constantly falling from the surface waters for the support of the animal life of the abyss. A very large number of the deep sea animals are extremely poisonous or translucent in form—so to put it—having no special organs of nutrition, but taking in their nourishment through the walls of their bodies, appropriating from the water the food which suits them. Some of them have a bony structure, a skeleton, which they form also from the water, silica and carbonate of lime being the chief skeleton-forming materials."

The Dear Friends.

Miss Paloozer—"Doesn't that Spoonall make you tired? I asked him the other evening what made him so lackadaisical, and he sighed and said it was because he lacked a dash to brighten and sweeten his life."

Miss Jellies—"No wonder you didn't like that. He knows your name is Rose."

A Suggestion to Russia.

The czar has "decided not to hire Schwab to build another navy for Russia. At this distance, says the Chicago Record-Herald, it looks as if the czar might well pay somebody to gather such remnants of a navy as Russia still has and take it so far away that it could never possibly get back again."

A WIRE FENCE.

BY FLORENCE V. DILLON.

"You see, girls," said Mrs. Blithers, "when we bought this house last spring, one of the most delightful features, to our minds, was the absence of fences and sheds in the whole block. You know the back yards of the houses on all four sides run together and form one beautiful green lawn. Nothing disturbs the open sweep of velvety sod, and the pride we all took in our yards was really distressing. If anyone had mentioned fence he would have been immediately mobbed. And our yard! It was just a bow of roses and vines and flowers of every description. We worked early and late, with mower and hose and rake, with Billy, the baby, beside us in his perambulator, but this spring we found we had a very different phase of the question to deal with. Billy is a year older and of a very investigating turn of mind. Instead of quietly lying in his buggy kicking his feet and waving his fat little hands in the air, he is the busiest baby that ever breathed. And from a pink cheeked, plump young mother I became gaunt and hollow eyed, vain endeavor to keep my soil off of my neighbors' flower beds.

"By some irresistible attraction, as soon as the door opened out upon the fat little body and straight into some one's hotbeds or tulips, and by the time the early spring flowers were through blooming I almost had nervous prostration. When he wasn't digging among the newly planted seeds, or down the terrace and away. The only peace I had was when the little fellow had his nap, and then I feverishly rushed through my daily housework that I might be on guard at his first waking moment.

"This went on for some time, until one night in a solemn council of war Mr. Blithers and I decided it would be either a fence or sell out the move. We could make up our minds to that, so it had to be the fence. But how? Fate aided us. Mrs. McCorkle sent out invitations for a musicale and Billy took the whooping cough. Don't laugh, now. You see we had to scheme. If we could once get the fence up we would be safe, but it was the getting it up that bothered.

"It happened that we had a roll of wire netting in the basement, purchased for vines and things, so Jack measured and painted and sawed his posts and we waited for the night of Mrs. McCorkle's musicale. Baby's whooping cough, of course, was our excuse for remaining at home, and my how we worked! Everyone in the neighborhood went, so that we were safe for two hours at least. Jack dug postholes as if he were hunting for buried gold on a time limit while I held a little dark lantern. We felt like 'thieves in the night'; once I thought I saw the red end of a cigar in the dark and we scampered for the house like frightened mice. It's funny to tell of it now, but it was most exciting then, and deadly serious, too, I can tell you.

"Well, we finished in safety, and we were up at daylight to see how it looked, and really it wasn't half bad to see. Jack had painted it all a nice green so that it didn't distinguish itself from the grass. The first part of the morning so that he might escape his neighbor's reproachful looks, and I didn't peep my nose out of doors for fear I might be taken for a spy. The indignation should cool down. Of course they all had a good deal to say, but that fence was up to stay, for a year at least.

"Now, in our back yard, instead of making a specialty of monthly roses and rare flowers, we have in full bloom a large sized sand pile, a miniature tent, a wheelbarrow and again, the healthiest, happiest baby in the neighborhood. And I—why, I'm a living testimonial to the good services of the fence. The neighbors are getting to appreciate it, too. Every day some mother comes to corral her baby while she has something special to attend to. And here am I sitting so comfortably and contentedly as possible with the knowledge that my boy is safe and out of mischief.

"Who is that coming up on the porch? A policeman! Why, what on earth can he want?"

"If you please, ma'am, I've brought back your boy. We've been ridin' him on the horses, ma'am, down at the station, but I thought maybe you might be wantin' him."

"My boy! The fence! Mrs. Blithers made a dash to the back yard, followed by her four sympathetic friends, the policeman and the baby.

An incredibly small round hole in the meshes of wire equaled the story of the squirming escape.

"Girls, K's to the basement with iron bars next," and Mrs. Blithers' lip quivered perceptibly—Kansas City Star.

Czar as an Insurance Risk.

The czar has been the most active recent risk in England companies. Up to a week before last Christmas the rate on his life was five per cent. per annum. On December 19 holders of Russian bonds, who insured him with Lloyd's for some tens of thousands of pounds, had to pay 15 per cent. for a policy running only ten months. After the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius and the terrorists threat to wipe out the imperial family, the czar suddenly retired from activity as an insurance risk. Nobody wanted him at the price the underwriters placed on his life—Leslie's Monthly.

The doctors did me no good, and I had given up all hope of being cured, when my druggist advised me to use Herbine. It has made me sound and well." 50c. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

It always gives immediate relief, is very pleasant and gives perfect satisfaction." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

GAINSBOROUGH THE ARTIST

Wilds of Brush Painted Portraits for a Living, But Landscapes for His Own Pleasure.

Gainsborough, while painting portraits for a living, painted landscapes for his own pleasure, and lived at Hampstead during the summer that he might be constantly in fellowship with nature. It was this love of nature and of simple things, and the faculty of seeing beauty in them, that gave such a choice distinction to his work, because it was the expression of his own simple, lovable personality, says St. Nicholas. He had fed in himself, and all his life it had been a simple delight—the joys of nature, of domestic happiness, of music and of his own art.

He was born in the little town of Sudbury, on the river Stour, in the beautiful county of Suffolk. As a boy he loved to ramble in the country, sketching; and showed so much inclination for it, and so little for any other kind of study, that when he was 15 he was sent to London and placed under the care of a silversmith, who procured him admission in the St. Martin's Lane academy. Here he worked for three years studying painting. Gainsborough's eighteenth year was an eventful one. He hired three rooms in Hatton's Gardens and set up as a painter on his own account. Meeting with little encouragement, he returned to Sudbury; there he fell a victim to the charms of a young lady of 17, Miss Margaret Burr, who had an annuity of £1,000 a year, and established himself in the country town of Ipswich. Here he worked on happily and quietly for 15 years, continually studying in the open air and executing such small commissions for portraits as came to him, until he had succeeded in discovering for himself a manner of painting suited to his needs, and had developed an extraordinary skill.

In 1760 he moved to Bath, at that time the most fashionable city outside of London. The gay world of the time congregated there to drink the waters. Gainsborough's success was immediate, but with increasing wealth there was no alteration in his simple method of living.

A TRAGEDY OF THE MARKET

Agent of Gin Company Gets on the Outside and Dies of a Broken Heart.

Steenstrand was the agent of the Holland Gin company in England, says Public Opinion. He was an outsider in cotton, but he had money, and he started to corner the July-August option in Liverpool. As usual the bears tried to break him by delivering cotton. Steenstrand took up 300,000 bales, worth at the market price a little over $20,000,000. There was not another bale that could be tendered him. All he feared now was a slump in futures. One of his principal antagonists was a prominent dealer in actual cotton. This man had done business with the banks of Liverpool for years. He went to these financial institutions and laid down the law to them.

"You must choose between Steenstrand and me," said he. "I am here all the time. Steenstrand will come but once, for we are going to break him. You must renew his loans."

He got the promise. Just about this time one of Steenstrand's brokers went to this same cotton dealer and told him his principal was about at the end of his resources. The broker also wished to dispose of some July-August cotton he had bought. This deal was made. Then the cotton dealer turned to the broker. "Excuse me just a minute," he said.

As he went out of the office he took the key in the lock and the broker was left a prisoner, while the shrewd cotton dealer went down to the cotton pit and sold 50,000 bales of July-August futures. He had found Steenstrand's weak point and he broke the market. Cotton dropped the equivalent of three cents a pound in an hour, and Steenstrand was ruined. He died of a broken heart about six months afterward.

one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages,
and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh

Catarrh being a constitutional dis-

foundation of the disease, and giv-

up the constitution and assisting na-

The call for the extra session of the 59th Congress will compel the organization of the House of Representatives three weeks earlier than it otherwise would be organized, and if the delay in the organization of the House were all that would result the legislation that the President asks for, he would get some action inside of the three weeks before the beginning of the regular session. It is practically a foregone conclusion that our "Uncle Joe"
Cannon will be re-elected Speaker
and the old office of the 58th Congress is re-elected. So far as the Democratic minority is concerned,
there is not a shadow of doubt that the Hon. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, will again be the caucus
nominee for Speaker, which carries with it the floor leadership during the life of the 59th Congress and
there could not be a better selection.

"Waiting for a Bite" is the apt
title of the front page picture of the August American Boy, bringing a vision of cooling breezes, sandy shores, camps, boats and woods, with all the delightful occupations incident to "the good old summer time."
Of course every reader of the "American Boy" will want to know about the American Boy Day celebrations
and this number contains an account of the splendid one at the Lewis and Clark Exposition at Portland, Ore.,
with pictures of many of the boys
and their friends who took part in it, and also of the celebration at Bedford, Pa., with a large group
picture. Those fine continued stories
"For the Mikado" and "A French Frog and an American Eagle," still increases interest. Among the other stories, of which there is variety
enough to please every reader,
"Jimmy and the Goat," in which a boy for a prize triumphantly rides a notorious "butter," will be read
with delight.

The revenue agents have been given another set back in their work
of compromising omitted tax assessments for cash in hand, with the assistance of employed attorneys. In a written opinion delivered by At-

which the action is instituted, and
pay him the usual fees.

President Roosevelt preached a lay sermon to the Christian Brotherhood of Oyster Bay Sunday afternoon. His appearance was a surprise to most of the audience, as he had stipulated that there should be no advance announcement of his acceptance of an invitation to address
the brotherhood. He took the text
from his discourse from the Scriptures largely from Matthew, and his discourse was a disquisition on
the elemental elements of a life of grace and christian conduct.

BETSY ROSE.

A quiet house, a quiet street,
A little and a thread,
A squire and a square of blue,
A slender hand that deftly stitched
The shining stars across—
Twas thus the flag of Liberty
Was made by Betsy Rose.
Though Father Time has worn to rags
The stars and stripes of things,
And left the guns of war to rust
Among forgotten things;
Though crowns and scepters to the touch
Have turned to dust and dross—
And all that Liberty has spared
The work of Betsy Rose.
In stately hall and lowly home
This day its colors wave,
The shelter of the orphan's oppressor,
The beacon of the brave,
The emblem of the nation's life,
Among the stars embossed
The thread, the needle, and the name
And fame of Betsy Rose.

A Pleasant Evening in the Yards

By S. E. KISER.

DAILY of a man who has bought a berth in a sleeping car that is to be started on its journey at three o'clock
in the morning, the passenger being permitted to enter at 10:30 and go to bed:
10:45—Ah, this is delightful. There is nobody in the upper berth; the night
is just cool enough for comfort, and I'll have over four hours of good, solid
sleep before the first start.
10:50—They have run a switch engine up beside this car, and it is blowing
off steam with a roar that would make Nimrod wonder why the humming of a mosquito, I wonder why they don't save their coal!
11:01—They are now ringing the bell
on a switch engine. "It sounds as if it were about five and one-half inches
from my ear."
11:14—Biff! That was an awful bump. I guess I was dozing. I thought for a minute that we had been wrecked.
They must have had a freight train get loose and bang into us. Another shock
like that and my heart is likely to jump
the fence.
11:16—We're moving. I can't understand it. The agent said our car would stand in the yard till three o'clock.

Off! Confound it! What are they trying to do with us, anyway? We must have run against a stone wall.
11:28—I wish I hadn't come in so early. What a beauty Grace Leamington is—and as clever as she's pretty. I might have been with her instead of wasting time in this stuffy car for the past hour, too! I'm a Rocky Mountain
sheep if they haven't run that switch engine up beside us again. I wonder why they keep ringing the confounded bell. They certainly can't be afraid of running over people while the old machine is standing still at this time of night.
11:40—No use. I can't go to sleep
here. They've run the switch engine
away, but that fellow in the next berth
is going to die in a minute or two. No man can use his breathing apparatus to make such sounds as he's making
and live. I wonder if he has a wife and family! I'll be a sad task to break
the news to them.
11:53—Oh, heavens, but this is lovely! The conductor and porter are now quarrelling with somebody about my ticket. I was just going to sleep, too.
I wish I had sat up and smoked.
12:07—At last things are quiet. The porter has turned down the lights.
Now for a good, refreshing sleep. I need it. I wonder if Grace Leamington
is likely to get into his old age?
12:21—Um-m-m! Heavens! We must have been run into by the fast mail
that time. I hope nobody's killed. It has confounded switch engine. It has come back and booked onto us. I wonder where we're going now. Oh, well,
I don't care much. Danger and death
no longer seem terrible to me. Maybe they're going to shove us into the roundhouse. If they only book us
on a moving I believe I could go to sleep easier than when it's standing still. I wouldn't be surprised if Grace Leamington got rather heavy after she's
40. Her mother must weigh at least 120 pounds.
12:33—Bang, once more! I'll bet the man who's running that switch engine
never had hold of a throttle before.
But perhaps his brake is broken, so that the only way he can stop is by running against something. Oh, well,
I glad I got here as soon as the car was opened. It would have been a pity if I had missed any of the refreshing
rest waiting.

12:40—I'm going to report this conductor. I don't believe the company
pays him merely to stand in the aisle
talking with the porter while the passengers are trying to get the sleep
they've given up their good cash for.
1:02—There it is again. The switch engine's not back. Oh, well, it's all over, too! You can't disturb me any more by blowing your whistle than you do by ringing your bell. The next time
I get a berth in a sleeper that doesn't start till three in the morning, they'll have to have a keeper on each side of me, I'll tell them that. Let her whistle!
Don't mind me! I'll bet a hundred dollars that engineer has a grudge
against somebody in this car and is trying to give him a case of nervous prostration. Grace takes after her father. That's all enough. Still, I don't know but that I'd rather be married to a woman who got a little too
pumped along late in life than to one
who tried to do nothing but skin
and bones.
1:23—We're off again. This is the last time they're run in down on the track and then run us back, with a nerve-destroying bump at each end.
Oh, well, I guess there's no use trying to go to sleep now. I'm going to take it philosophically and save wear and tear
on my temper.
1:37—For heaven's sake! They're pulling at somebody now to get up on the roof of this car and pour water into
it. I wonder if they didn't have time to attend to that earlier in the evening, when people were not trying to sleep. I believe this road is run by lunatics.
1:50—I know that man in the next
berth is now in the line to die! Any man who can sleep through a racket like
this deserves an ignominious death.
Still, I don't suppose he's a murderer. He makes so much noise of his own that he doesn't know anything else is going on. That's the great advantage of being a snorer. I know why
a man who snores is always alive at the end of the night.
2:02—Ouch! That bump nearly threw me into the aisle. I wonder why they always run into us from the direction toward which one's head points? I'll bet there are seven distinct impacts
of my skull on the partition between this and the next berth. Oh, if the coupling would only break and let us
run into the river!
2:15—The porter has hauled us
back near the station. Twenty people outside are trying to talk at once. I can't make out what they're saying, but it must be true. I can hear my porter, who evidently is standing at the car steps, laughing with great enthusiasm.
2:20—Hello! Our old friend the switch engine has returned with steam
up and the safety-valve showing what it's there for. I don't suppose they can hold room for it anywhere else in the yard.
2:41—Thank heaven! Only 10 minutes to wait in this inferno! Jerusalem!
2:45—The porter is shouting us around somewhere again. I wonder if it would do that poor fellow any good to pour
some kind of a lubricant into his windings? It's too bad that Grace's hair is so dark. Otherwise the down on her upper lip wouldn't show at all.
2:53—The Pullman conductor has just yelled to the porter that the train
to which we are to be attached is an hour and 50 minutes late. Good-by,
proud world, good-by! I'm going out
to throw myself in front of the switch engine. If an all-wise Providence felt that I had any right to live this could never have happened to me.—Chicago

SMALL FIRE. Mr. Barbour's Family Lose Their Clothing.

Sunday night at a quarter past eight a fire alarm was turned in from
the corner of Third and Clay streets.
The fire department promptly responded, but found it unnecessary to turn on the water, as the fire had not gained sufficient headway to necessitate it. The fire originated in the family room of Mr. A. F. Barbour, who has a chair in Hotel
Latham barber shop. The family
was not at home, but were visiting
on East Ninth street.
The fire was discovered by neighbors, who saw through the windows
that the room was full of smoke.
The door was forced open and the destruction of the building and its contents was narrowly averted by
the prompt action of the fire department and the neighbors. Mr.
Barbour was notified and when he arrived the fire had been extinguished.
He had no idea how the fire
originated, as every precaution was taken before the family started on their family call. It is thought that probably rats got hold of some
matches that were in the closet,
thus starting the fire. Most of the clothing belonging to the family was either burned or ruined with water.
Mr. Barbour's loss is placed at $250.
Long & Cooper had a risk on the property and have tabulated the
damages for adjustment.

Thousands Have Kidney

Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle of common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in five-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When you write mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Clarence Riddle, aged twenty-four, a son of William Riddle, of near Owensboro, was received at the Western Asylum for treatment Saturday. His mind has been unbalanced for some time and on Thursday he visited the home of his brother. He found no one at home and he scattered the furniture about the house and pitched the Bible on the roof with the intention, he said, of seeing if he could not change the manner of trials in Owensboro. Riddle belongs to one of the best families in Daviess county.

TODD COUNTIAN

Seems to be in Trouble at Cairo Illinois.

Capt. Joe Wood, of the police force, received a message over the long distance telephone from the Cairo authorities, stating that a young fellow named Marvin Johnson, of Trenton, Ky., had been arrested there and locked up on the charge of beating up an old man down about the Halliday House. It was not known who the aged party was or the extent of his wounds. A message received by The Register stated two men were beat up and the body of one thrown into the river where it was rescued by a fisherman, and also that it is thought one of the men is dying. It is claimed that Johnson passed himself off as an immigration agent and got into the confidence of the two others—Paducah Register.

An Aged Pair.

Candidates for governor of Alabama are being groomed on a strange theory, and that is that the governor who is elected in 1906 for a four year term will most likely have the appointment of one United States senator, perhaps two of three. The present incumbents, General Pettus and General Morgan, will be elected without opposition, though Morgan is eighty-one and Pettus is eighty-three. Consequently the senatorial aspirants believe that one or the other—perhaps both—will die before his term is out; hence every man who wants to go to the senate is grooming a candidate for governor who he thinks will appoint him in the event of a vacancy. The chances are that both Pettus and Morgan will still be in the senate hall and hearty, when the 1906 governor of Alabama shall have finished his four year term and retired to private life.—Champ Clark.

Fraud Exposed.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection, to you, is our name on the wrapper. Look for it on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. UNWRITTEN TEAM LAW.

That Should be Understood By Owners of Teams.

DAMAGES RECOVERABLE

No One Should Leave Teams on the Public Highway.

There has been much talk about teamsters, when coming into or going out of the city, leaving their teams and taking a seat in another wagon to have a talk with the driver. This is a dangerous custom and sometimes results in somebody's property being injured by such carelessness. People seem to forget, if they have ever known, that there is what the law terms "criminal negligence."

There has been an expressed desire on the part of the farmers to know exactly what is the law in regard to this matter, and we have been asked to make it public.

The point on which information is asked is this: Suppose a man, driving a team for another man, leaves his team to jog along the road at its own will, gets into the wagon of another man, someone meets the team without a driver and damage results to the owner of the second named team of the team, either to his person or his team or wagon, from whom can damages be recovered, the negligent driver or the owner of the team?

The county attorney has been consulted and he says both. That is the teamster is the agent of the owner of the team, and the driver is entrusted with his team, wagon and contents. No one gave the owner the right to dispossess him, and it is his duty to his employer to take care of his property, and when he leaves the team to its own will, then he is derelict.

If an approaching team, vehicle, contents or the person of the one who may be in the vehicle or wagon sustains injury by the carelessness of the first mentioned driver in leaving his team, then the injured can recover by process of law from the teamster or the owner of the team, or both.

This is what the county attorney calls an unwritten law. It has been in effect from time immemorial. The same law is operative in cases where injured parties recover damages from railroad and other corporations.

There is, however another phase of the question: If a driver maliciously causes a loss to the owner of another team, then the responsibility of the owner of the first named team ceases and his driver, or agent, alone is responsible.

There is still another phase to the question: Can the owner of a team recover from his driver for damages sustained by the driver's negligence when it causes loss to the owner? On this point we cannot speak advisedly, but from a common-sense view of the case we would say yes. Every agent should be responsible to his employer.

The above may seem tautologous to some, but it is about as brief a way as possible to make plain the law long in force and point out the duty of teamsters to their employers. The farmers are interested in the matter, and it is their duty to fully advise their employes in regard to themselves and the public and warn them against negligence of duty in this respect, as well as to enlighten as to the penalty in such cases.

Poisons in Food.

Perhaps you don't realize that many plain poisons originate in your food, but some day you may feel a twinge of dyspepsia that will convince you. Dr. King's New Life Pills are guaranteed to cure all sickness due to poisons of undigested food—or money back. See at R. C. Hardwick drug store. Try them.

DRAGGING

down pains are a symptom of the most serious trouble which can attack a woman, viz: falling of the womb. With this, generally, come irregular, painful, scanty or profuse periods, wasteful, weakening drains, dreadful backache, headache, nervousness, dizziness, irritability, tired feeling, inability to walk, loss of appetite, color and beauty. The cure is that marvelous, curative extract, or natural wine, of herbs, which exerts such a wonderful, strengthening influence on all female organs. Cardui relieves pain, regulates the menses, stops drains and stimulates the womb muscles to pull the womb up into place.

WINE OF CARDUI

THE FEMALE REGULATOR,

It is a sure and permanent cure for all female complaints.

"I SUFFERED AWFUL PAIN"

"In my womb and organs," writes Mrs. Susan Baker, of Western Grove, Mo. "I suffered in my right and left sides, and my menses were very painful and irregular. Since taking Cardui I feel like a new woman, and I no longer suffer as I did. It is the best medicine I ever had in my life."

State College of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

The Agricultural and Mechanical (State College) of Kentucky offers the following courses of study, viz.: Agricultural, Horticultural, Chemical, Biological, Mathematical, Physical, Normal School, Classical, Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Civil Engineering, and Mining Engineering, each of which extends over four years and leads to a degree. Each course of study is organized under a separate faculty. The general faculty number nearly fifty professors and instructors.

Courtesy applicants receive free tuition, room rent in the dormitories, fuel and light, and if they remain ten months, traveling expenses.

The laboratories and museums are large, well equipped, comprehensive and modern.

The Legislature appropriated $60,000 for a college home for young women and $30,000 for drill hall and gymnasium for men. Both buildings are completed and in use. Military tactics and science are fully provided for as required by Congress.

Graduates from the several courses of study readily find excellent positions and liberal remuneration. The demand is largely in excess of the ability of the College to supply.

Specialists with the necessary number of assistants have charge of each department of natural science. Summer schools are provided for pedagogy, engineering, instruction in science and in arts.

The State College of Kentucky, though bearing hitherto the title of "college," is the only institution in the Commonwealth doing, in any proper sense, university work.

The completion of the College home for young women provides facilities for good board and lodging. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, including bath rooms and room for physical culture. It is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

An opportunity is thus afforded to young women of obtaining a thorough education in classics, modern language, literature, science, mathematics, logic, metaphysics, history, and political economy.

No other institution in the State offers advantages for education of women at all comparable to those offered by the State College of Kentucky.

CAMPING SONG.

Has your genius lost its savor,
Has your genius lost its cheer?
Is your daily stout a burden?
Is your lazier habit a snare?
There's a medicine to cure you,
There's a way to lift your load,
With a horse and saddle and a mile of open
road.

Is your eyeball growing bluish?
Is your forehead wrinkled short?
Is this life a blind delusion,
Or a vain and empty sort?
There's a world of health and beauty,
There's a help that cannot fail,
In a day's ride on horse and saddle,
On a dusty mountain trail.

Come out, old man, we're going
To a land that's free and large
Where the rainbows are resting
On a snowy mountain range.
When we camp on the mountain country,
You will find yourself again,
With a horse and saddle and a mile of open
road.

Belinda's Views

By M. A. TAFT.

"IF IT were not for the men," said Belinda, "there would be no marriages."

"Naturally," returned Phyllis, unimpressed.

"I mean," continued Belinda, with dignity, "that if the men did not insist, no woman would marry."

"Oh," said Phyllis, opening her eyes wide.

"Shakespeare," Belinda went on in her most seriously argumentative tone, "knew nothing about it."

Phyllis could not belong to the Shakespeare club, and so she remained silent.

"What was it about Anne Hathaway?" she hazarded finally, remembering the pretty little picture of the Hathaway cottage Belinda had given her.

"No, indeed, it was not," said Belinda. "It was Rosalind, and of course I just dote on Shakespeare, and the club is too sweet for anything, and I wouldn't go to bed a night in my life without reading just a line or two from the 'Merchant of Venice,' or a wenny bit of 'Julius Caesar,' and one New Year's night I came home from a party and read a whole chapter of 'Titus Andronicus,' when I was so sleepy I didn't know a word I read, but I think it is too mean about Rosalind, for she wasn't the kind of girl to say that at all."

"No, of course not," said Phyllis, sympathetically. "You mean about marriage?"

"Yes," said Belinda. "It's one of those famous parts of 'As You Like It,' you know, about time ambling and trotting and galloping—and, well, just implies that all girls are anxious to get married, and you know that isn't true, is it?"

"No—no," replied Phyllis.

"That catching-the-car story is very true."

"Catching-the-what, Belinda?" asked Phyllis, confused.

"Why, that catching-the-car story. It is told in just the horrid way I mean, but it is as true as anything."

"Why, there was a poor woman who got so sad because she said she knew her husband didn't love her any more."

"Well, she was as sad as sad could be, but her husband said it was all right, and he did love her just as much, only he said, you see, it is just like catching the car."

"Oh!" said Phyllis.

"That was funny, wasn't it? 'You see,' said this horrid man, 'when I am trying to catch the car I run for it and make a great hullabaloo and wave my stick at the motorman. But when I get in I sit down quietly and read my paper. That is the way it is about matrimony. I am just as much interested in the car though I don't go waving my stick after I have caught it. It is just the same with my wife, though I think just as much of her as I did before I was married.'"

"Now, I think that's a perfectly horrid story, and that was a very horrid man, and the worst of it is, it certainly is true."

Belinda lowered her voice, a horrified look came over her face, and Phyllis looked on in sympathy.

"Now, that is just what I mean about girls getting married, and Belinda spoke seriously and solemnly. 'Every man in the world is just bound to catch the car, and every girl would just like to keep running after it all day and all night, over and over, and never catching it.' Belinda drew a long breath.

"Of course I don't mean that any girl would be mean, but she would like to keep him going along at just a comfortable jog along in the line, you know, a man would? Not a bit of it. No, sir—e. He wants to catch the car, and he wants to catch it pretty quickly, and if he doesn't catch it just as he catches another car. That's just what a man will do every time."

"You see, a girl likes to have a man come to see her, and it's very nice if he takes her out sometimes, and of course every girl likes a little candy once in awhile, and a few flowers, and it is pleasant to have some one always ready to dance with you, and the girl will be as just as nice and sweet and polite as she can be, and wear her prettiest gowns when she goes out, because a man does like to be seen with a girl who dresses well. Oh, she would be very nice to him, indeed."

"She would not even mind being engaged and wear a ring, and then of course you can go out more, and then you can go to hear people whisper that pretty Miss—er—er—Miss Smith is engaged to that handsome Tom—er—er—er."

It gives you a little standing, and makes people think a little more of you."

"That's just the way a girl wants to go along in a nice, pleasant way, and she doesn't care for a pleasant time as she can. But there isn't one man in 1,000 who is satisfied."

"I don't like to think so, Phyllis, but I am afraid this is the way of the world, and they will only go on with the flowers and the candy and all that for just so long. Then a girl must just say a plump 'yes' or 'no,' and then she is engaged, and she can't even say engaged, but she must set the day for the wedding, and then, you see, the man has caught her, and there are no more flowers, no more candy, no more—well, if Tom forgets anything else there'll be trouble."

"There was a car on our belt, Belinda, on right in our own set. Bella is so pretty! And Dick Jenkins was just dead in love with her! I must say Bella was very nice to him, and she went almost everywhere with him, and wore his flowers, and read the books he brought to her, and she was just having a lovely time, and it might have gone on till now, only Dick 'collected.'"

"Bella liked him awfully well, but not quite well enough to be engaged to him. So when he proposed she said 'no,' and she said they were not friends and all that, and she hoped it would all be just as it was before, only nicer, because they would both be independent. But what did the man do?"

"Why, he went right off in a huff and married that new girl who came to town, and I don't see they were very happy, only it was too bad he couldn't have been contented to be just a good friend with Bella, for she is about the nicest girl I know of. It is very hard to understand men, and Belinda sighed."

"But I thought you were very anxious to go to housewifery in your little flat, Belinda," said Phyllis.

"Why, that's quite different," said Belinda, with dignity. "We have the all furnished, and it is sure and sound, cunning little place it will be just like a doll's house, and I always did love to play in a doll's house. And then Tom says I don't know how to cook and I just want to show him that it is as easy as easy can be, and that you don't have to study it, as you do to be a doctor or a lawyer."

"Oh, yes, that's quite different," said Belinda.—N. Y. Times.

SIGNS OF MORAL INANITY

Abnormal Mental Tendencies Noted by Prominent English Physician.

Testifying before the royal commission on the care and control of the feeble-minded, Dr. C. A. Mercier, representing the Royal College of Physicians, reports the Washington Star,

"It certainly think there is such a thing as moral insanity."

Some remarkable cases were mentioned by Dr. Mercier.

An intelligent child of seven had learned about the pawnbroking business by reading an article in a magazine. Having learned while at dinner where some rings were kept he took an opportunity of slipping into the rooms, took the rings and went out and pawned them. It was a deeply laid plot.

Dr. Mercier did not say that the child was responsible at that age, but certainly was not the conduct of a normal child who had that very day been soundly thrashed for stealing.

A normal child could be made to appreciate and reason what he did do, but this child could not be made to appreciate it.

There was another case of a young man who, while attending one of the military colleges as a student, stole some clothes and wore them in the presence of their rightful owners. He was amply supplied with clothes and money by his parents, but he liked these clothes better than his own, and took them. He could not be persuaded that it was a wrong thing to do, but there was no other symptom in him of imbecility.

Dr. Mercier went on to give another case of a nurse who, he said, had poisoned her patients with arsenic. It was impossible at that time to discover any intellectual defect in her. She was found morally insane because no motive could be traced. Indeed the persons she poisoned were her intimate friends. After she had been in an asylum for several years symptoms of moral insanity began to exhibit themselves, and she soon became very deeply insane.

Liver Disease.

THE liver is the great filtering apparatus of the alimentary, or digestive, system. It filters the poisonous bile out of the blood. When the liver lacks ability to do this work, then the bile passes through into the general circulation and begins its poisonous work. Through the circulation of the blood it is disseminated throughout the body, gradually sapping the strength, clouding the brain, weighing down the energies, weakening the heart's action, infecting and undermining the system. Eventually the poison begins to accumulate at the skin, the kidneys, the bronchial tubes, or the lungs, until at last it settles and fastens itself at some point, which location may be far away from the liver; yet it is stagnation of congestion of the liver which is the immediate cause of the whole trouble.

SYMPTOMS OF LIVER COMPLAINT.

Not infrequently, in liver disease, the complexion becomes pale and sallow, there may be frequent attacks of bilious or sick headache, bitter taste in the mouth, tongue coated white, and covered with a brown fur, unnatural, dry, harsh, or scaly condition of the skin, or branny eruptions, pimples, dark blotches, and troublesome itching. There are likely to be "backache" and tired feelings, lassitude and a sense of debility. There is depression of spirits and a decided tendency to be discouraged and despondent. There is loss or irregularity of appetite, uneasiness in region of the stomach, oppression, sometimes sour stomach, "burning," nausea and "water-brash," flatulency, and acid eructations; the bowels become irregular, usually constipated, and occasionally subject to diarrhea, attended with colicky pains. The foregoing symptoms are not all present in any one case, nor are any two cases alike in every respect.

The only way to help a disordered liver is to treat it as it is—the great, organic, human filter. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cleanses and clears it; invigorates and revitalizes this most important organ by its wonderful alterative power. For biliousness, indigestion, weak stomach, and kindred ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: "Dear Sir:—I wish to express my appreciation of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' as a remedy for liver trouble. I am in an office in New York City, and I have been gradually getting bilious and nervous, and suffering from frequent attacks of headache and dizziness. I have been a great eater, suffered from headache and was always tired, even after a good sleep. My physician said my condition was due to a liver trouble, and he prescribed for me a few bottles of your medicine. The result was magical. My appetite returned with the first bottle. I continued the use of the medicine until at the end of two months I was entirely cured. I shall always have great faith in your medicine."

THE BETTER MAN.

Big Larry, the guide, looked the young man over and concluded that he didn't like him. The young man, who had hardly deigned to look at the guide since he had disembarked from the little lake steamer, seemed to disapprove of everything in general—woods, lake and sky. He was attired in a hunting suit of perfect newness. A small mountain of baggage, including guns and a canvas cot, was piled beside him on the primitive jerry of birch poles. He looked from the baggage to the guide and from the guide to the birchbark canoe.

"Where is the village?" he asked sharply.
 "There ain't no village that I know of," answered Big Larry.
 "Isn't this Wigwag landing?"
 "That's what they call it, but there's no village nearer than Blenville, and that 60 miles by water and 93 by land. What do you want of a village, anyway? I thought you came to hunt."
 "You can keep your speculation to yourself, my man, and tell me how you are going to take care of my baggage," said the newcomer.

Big Larry smiled with deceptive sweetness. "I guess we can take the guns and your fishin' tackle and blankets along," he said. "I've got all the other necessities. We can cache the rest of this plunder if you want to go on any farther—or you can camp right here if you don't want to leave it. The boat will be back in a week."

"We'll camp here," said the young man, decidedly. "You can consider that you are hired for the week and no longer. I'll go on to Blenville and see if I can't get a guide that knows his business."

He stopped abruptly, for the guide's great hand had shot out and grasped him by the nape of the neck.
 "Can you swim?" asked Larry. Without waiting for a reply, he pitched his employer into the lake. Then he got into his canoe and began to paddle away, but apparently thinking better of it, returned to the jetty and walked ashore just as the young man scrambled out.

The young man started for his baggage on the run, but in an instant Big Larry had him by the collar and was shaking him. "You wait awhile before I trust you with a gun," said the guide. "I'll take charge of them. I've dropped the young man into some bushes and returning to the pier, took the guns from their cases. They were breech-loaders and loaded. He emptied out the cartridges, which he transferred to his pocket."

"Now," said Big Larry, "I want you to understand just where you are. I hired out as guide and if you had kept a civil tongue in your head I'd have done what it's my business to do, but as it is I'll just have you for a sort of chore boy for the next week. I never had a pup millionaire to wait on me yet. You can start in now by gathering in some dry wood for a fire. Hurry, now."

Sullenly the young man obeyed him. The guide began to arrange some fishing tackle. "There's the best in that rise," he called to the amateur wood gatherer. "I am going to catch a few for supper."

In about an hour he called from the bank: "Come here and get these fish." The young man dropped the armful of sticks he was carrying and hurried to the bank where the guide was sitting. Big Larry grinned. "You're learning, ain't you?" he said. "Clean these fish and I'll start a fire and we'll have some supper."

"I don't know how to clean fish," said the young man.
 "Bring 'em along, then, and I'll show you," the guide led the way to the jetty and faking out his knife scaled and cleaned one of the bass. Then he threw the knife over to the young man.

As the young man set busily to work the guide, smoking at his ease, began to talk to him. "You see how it is, don't you?" he said. "You begin to catch on? Here's you and me together and one of us is boss. Being as I'm an old man and have got the best headpiece the boss is naturally me. What a man's daddies is doesn't count in the wood."

"There's your fish," answered the young man. "Now what do we do?"
 "We'll build the fire," said the guide, raising and making his way to the wood pile. "Bring me some big sticks, now," he commanded.

"How will this do?" asked the young man, selecting a stout billet.
 "Give it to me," said the guide.
 The young man gave it to him—on the side of the head and with such heartiness that the guide toppled over. The young man rolled him tightly up in the tarpaulin that had covered his baggage. It was probably five minutes before Big Larry fully recovered his senses to find himself swathed like a mummy and unable to stir hand or foot.

"Let me out of this," said Big Larry.
 "What for?" asked the young man. "I can manage to keep these fish somehow. If I can't you can give me directions just as you are. What do you think about your headpiece by this time?"

"I don't know but yours is in better repair," admitted the guide. "There's more to you than I thought. Let me out of this and I'll call it square."
 "Who'd be boss if I turned you loose?"

"I'll let you be boss, if you like," said the guide; "but you've got to be decent or I'll drown you next time."
 "I'll take chances on that," said the young man, beginning to untie the tarpaulin. "Maybe we've both learned something."—Chicago Daily News.

Private Detective's Story
About Luster Didn't Take.

LUSTER NOT IN TOWN.

The Story a Reflection On Efficiency of Police Force.

A Kentuckian man had a talk with Chief of Police Shanklin in regard to a man who was in the city last week claiming to be a private detective, and who gave out the statement that Presly J. Luster, late of Guthrie, was in Hopkinsville. The "private detective" claimed that he knew Luster, whose wife was mysteriously murdered, that he was here and that he had seen him.

It seems that the detective was so certain of his man that he told some of the police officers that if he was furnished a little money he would find Luster and the officers could obtain the $250 offered for his arrest. The officers didn't take enough stock in the story to furnish the detective with the needed cash.

The detective's story casts a reflection on the efficiency of our police force. Chief Shanklin says it is strange that he didn't make the arrest and obtain the reward himself instead of offering to sell his information for a few dollars. The detective claims that he came down from Guthrie with Luster, that he saw him at Gracy and talked with him. This is a very improbable story and too plainly a fake to impose on the credulity of our officers. Chief Shanklin thinks it was merely an effort to obtain money, which the detective was probably in much need of. No one would for a moment believe that Luster, if he had committed the foul crime of murdering his wife, would have so little sense as to stop at a place so near his late home. He would know that it would simply be walking into the clutches of the officers of the law. The Chief of Police denounces the whole story as a fake pure and simple and not worthy of a moment's consideration. The detective could not be found yesterday and is supposed to have left the city.

THE SPARROWS' WORK.

Not a Blessing in Disguise
As Was Supposed.

Some weeks ago the Kentuckian called attention to the destructive work of the English sparrow, his general objectionable qualities, and the necessity of making war on the feathered enemies, but nothing has been done in that direction, though everybody seems to be in favor of exterminating the pests. The Glasgow, Ky., correspondent of the Nashville American has the following to say about the sparrow: "Complaint has been coming in thick and fast for sometime of the amount of wheat that has been and is being destroyed by English sparrows. Heretofore the sparrow has confined his operations to towns and cities, but in the past few years, owing perhaps to his limited field, he has begun to take up his habitation in the country. His coming was hailed by the farmers with delight, as his fame as a 'potato bugger' had preceded him. The agricultural papers and the farmer no doubt saw visions of the feathered help going from hill to hill eating the bugs off his early potatoes while he sat in the shade and read his paper or discussed political issues with his neighbors. But the vision was all. Instead of the sparrow being a blessing in disguise, it is a curse to the farmer as well as to his city brother. If this bird has one redeeming trait anywhere, country or town, it is yet undiscovered.

In several sections myriads of these sparrows swooped down on fields of ripening wheat and did untold damage. Each bird would light on a stalk, the stalk would break and then the little pests would devour, every grain in the head. Those who have suffered most say it is little short of marvelous how much wheat they can devour.

The damage is such that the situation is becoming alarming, taking into consideration the rate at which these birds multiply. It is conceded that something must be done and that at once, else, the farmers say, it will be impossible to raise wheat in this country in a few years.

All sorts of methods are being discussed but nothing definite has yet been settled on. Complaints are made all over the western part of the State.

Married His Sister.

A Jefferson City lady decided to scare her husband, who was quite a hard drinker, so he would reform. In order to do this she procured a costume of the devil he had worn at a masquerade. The next time the erring spouse came home feeling happy she quickly donned the costume. As he opened the door she stepped forward and said in a sepulchral voice, "Come with me—I am the devil!" The result rather startled her, as the response which greeted her was: "Zat so? Shake o' boy, I'm your brother-in-law; I married your sister!"—Kansas City Times.

Grave Trouble Foreseen.

It needs but little foresight to tell that when your stomach and liver are badly affected, grave trouble is ahead unless you take the proper medicine for your disease, as Mrs. John A. Young of Clay, N. Y., did. She says: "I had neuralgia of the liver and stomach, my heart was weakened and I could not eat. I was very bad for a long time, but in Electric Bitters, I found just what I needed, for they quickly relieved and cured me." Best medicine for weak women. Sold under guarantee by R. C. Hardwick, druggist, at 50c a bottle.

EVERYBODY CLEAN-UP.

The Torridity of August Demands Cleanliness.

With the intensely hot weather which has been prevailing comes the suggestion that all should clean up their back premises and make free use of disinfectants. Never have we seen the streets in better condition, but don't neglect what is to be done to yards and alleys. Now is the time for free use of lime. Let everybody attend to this before inspecting officers call.

City Teachers' Examination.

An examination of applicants for certificates to teach in the city schools will be held on August 18 and 19 at the Clay Street building. Applicants for examination will please be present at the superintendent's office at 8:30 a. m. Friday, Aug. 18.
